

CHECK-UP OF APPALLING FIRE AT OHIO STATE "PENN" SHOWS THAT 317 CONVICTS LOST LIVES IN TERRIFIC BLAZE, WITH 130 OTHER PRISONERS NOW IN HOSPITAL

Believe That Answer to Question of Whereabouts of the Keys Will Fix Responsibility for the Holocaust—Commonwealth's Investigation Continues With Zest

(By H. T. Hopkins, I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 22.—State and county officials were at loggerheads here at noon today as to what official should direct the probe of the Ohio State Penitentiary holocaust Monday evening when 317 convicts lost their lives in one of Ohio's most appalling disasters.

County Prosecutor John J. Chester, Jr., at an investigation which was started at the State Prison this morning, by State Welfare Director Hal H. Griswold, demanded that Warden P. E. Thomas consent to his suspension.

Thomas refused to relinquish his office, even temporarily.

Chester argued that Thomas should step aside until the probe shall have been completed. The warden couldn't see it that way.

The County Prosecutor then attempted to conduct the investigation.

Governor Myers Y. Cooper at that juncture, stepped into the picture, sending assistants of the Attorney General to take charge of the probing proceedings. According to State law, Chester was automatically superseded.

United States soldiers and National Guardsmen, equipped with machine guns and tear-gas bombs today are patrolling the Penitentiary, inside and out, to guard against any possible attempted outbreak of convicts.

COLUMBUS, O., Apr. 22.—(INS)—
"Where were the keys?"

Satisfied that the answer to that question will fix the responsibility for the prison holocaust at the Ohio State Penitentiary yesterday evening when more than 300 convicts perished, State Welfare Director Hal H. Griswold today continued the Commonwealth's official investigation into the greatest prison fire in the history of the nation.

Hardly had the terrified screams of the injured and dying ceased, than Director Griswold was on the scene, demanding to know why the prisoners had not been released from their cells when the fire grew serious.

"Where were the keys to those cells?" demanded Griswold.

And, one after another, six witnesses paraded before him and told incoherent stories as to what became of the keys, the life bars to the trapped convicts in the blazing inferno of tiers of cells. The witnesses admitted that they didn't know.

The keys to the cells, it was explained, were kept in the guard room more than 300 yards across the prison courtyard from the burning cell block. They disappeared quickly after the fire. None of the witnesses could account for them. There were 12 keys. Only a few were accounted for.

But then, grimly enough, there's no use for them . . . now.

Warden P. E. Thomas, of the penitentiary, in a statement to the Director, declared that he was in his residence in the front of the prison, when he heard the cry: "Fire!"

"I rushed to the guard room," he said. "There I turned in a second fire alarm. After calling to a guard to get the keys, I ran outside the prison where I posted guards in case a concentrated effort to escape was made."

"Who was that guard," asked Griswold.

"I don't know," replied the warden. Secretary Edward Jenkins, of the guards, told an almost similar story. He, too, said he had turned in a second alarm, and after running to the scene, had returned to the guardroom and then went outside the walls to see that guards were around the prison.

"What were your instructions in case of a fire?"

Stole Car, Robbed Gas Dealer And Figured in Accident

PARKLAND, Apr. 22.—Two men, one of whom was discharged from McKinley Hospital Friday afternoon, admitted to Langhorne State highway patrolmen that they had stolen a car which figured in an accident at this place Monday.

They also admitted, officers said, that they had robbed a gasoline station in Philadelphia, in order to obtain fuel and money for their joy ride.

The men are John Bauman, of 2623 Roberts avenue, and Lewis Pastusz, of 1907 Brunner street, both of Philadelphia. They are now in custody of Philadelphia police and will face charges in that city.

Bauman, injured in the accident shortly after the car was said to have been stolen from Joseph James, Philadelphia, was taken into custody by police of Trenton after being in the hospital for five days. He was turned over to Philadelphia authorities.

It was his information, police say, that led to the arrest of Pastusz, at his place of employment in a Philadelphia machine shop yesterday. He was taken to the South Langhorne station by Patrolman McAfee and Officer Durkoff, of the Philadelphia police, and questioned. He is said to have admitted the charges.

According to police, Bauman and his companion took the car early Monday morning in front of James' home. A block away, it was stated, they broke into a gasoline station and took fuel and money. They went for a joy ride.

The car crashed with a machine driven by Mrs. Bertha Lebow, Philadelphia. Both cars were wrecked. When police arrived they could not find the driver or passengers of the other machine. No one in the car of Mrs. Lebow was hurt.

An hour later Patrolman McAfee found Bauman nearby. He was badly bruised and refused to state how he was injured. He has been held under surveillance since then.

HUMANE EDUCATION WORK IS RAPIDLY EXPANDING

Growing Demand Noted For Care of Abandoned Animals by S. P. C. A.

CO. OFFICERS ELECTED

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 22.—Rapidly expanding work along the line of humane education and a growing demand for the care of abandoned animals was shown Saturday at the annual meeting of the Bucks County S. P. C. A., when officers were elected as follows:

President, George S. Hotchkiss; vice-president, Henry Afflerbach; secretary, Mrs. Irvin M. James; education secretary, Mrs. Fannie B. Risdon; Solebury, field secretary, H. K. Mellendorf; treasurer, W. Lawrence Mason; assistant treasurer, Mrs. David N. Fell, Jr.; Mechanics Valley, trustees, Miss Agnes Briggs, Mrs. P. H. Vanderkrift, Newtown; William R. Mercer, Doylestown; Mrs. Laura Livezey, Ivyland; Mrs. George H. Cliff, Langhorne; Miss Marion Tilton, Hulmeville; William Schemb, Wyncombe; Mrs. David N. Fell, Mechanics Valley; I. J. Vanartsdalen, Doylestown.

Mrs. David N. Fell, chairman of the refuge committee, announced that 16 calls were made by agents during the month and 21 dogs had been received at the refuge at Hollicong. Of the 21 nineteen were placed in good homes. So far this month the refuge has had 31 dogs. Receipts, she said, had nearly equalled expenditures, due to donations from those who turned over unwanted dogs or gave to support the work, and a contribution of $50 from the Red Star Animal Relief Association of Bristol. Miss Mary Haines who turned over the $50, and who earlier gave many books for the educational work, was given a vote of appreciation.

In the discussion concerning abandoned dogs, it was learned that one fertilizer factory receives about 50 dogs each month, but that some of them are sold. It was said an agreement was reached with the owner to have the society take care of the dogs that are received. A close watch is also being maintained on the disposition of dogs at public auctions.

H. K. Mellendorf, field secretary, who has charge of the refuge at Hollicong, told the society that among the dogs he had now are several very good ones for which he hopes to find homes. Included in the number are these: Two female police dogs, male collie, female pointer, female Lewellyn setter, male Airedale, male hound and male shepherd.

Agent Theodore Miller told of several investigations he had made.

DAIRYMAN TELLS COURT HIS SIDE OF INJUNCTION CASE

Neighbor Testifies the Present
Plant is Not Noisy or Objectionable

"CIDER MILL IS WORSE"

Owner Testifies Section Has Always Been An Industrial One

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 22.—Albert Smith, proprietor of Smith's Sanitary Dairy, a concern that is erecting a new plant that will supply a large part of the milk sold in Doylestown, yesterday had a chance to present his side of the case in the injunction proceedings brought against him by four property owners living in the vicinity of the Smith plant.

The case is being heard before Judge Hiram H. Keller. This was the third day of the hearing. Last week the petitioners including Joseph A. Wadock, Rolandus R. Peterman, James Stinson and his wife, Mrs. Mary S. Stinson, testified that the noise from the operation of the Smith plant early in the morning prevented them from sleeping. They claimed it spoiled a residential section of the town and that odors that come from the Smith plant in the summer are not pleasant to smell. They not only want the Court to enjoin the operation of the present plant, but the operation of the new plant now forty per cent completed.

The defendant, Smith, testified that his neighbors never complained to him about the noise at his plant and that he never asked them about it.

Under cross-examination, Smith stated that Joseph A. Wadock did come to his office and informed him that if he started the erection of a new plant that he (Wadock) would start injunction proceedings against him.

About 2000 bottles of milk are delivered every day in Doylestown by the Smith plant, Smith testified.

Smith, in answer to a question asked by counsel for the petitioners, stated that he did say to residents of Wood street that if his new plant is built that he would go before Council in an effort to get a good street, curb and gutter.

Smith denied that he promised the residents of that section that he would get these things without expense to them if the Court acted favorably for him in this proceeding.

"I did say that I would lay curb and gutter along Wood street at my expense, and would petition Council to rebuild the street if the new dairy plant is erected," Smith testified.

The new Smith plant which has been under construction since February, is of the most modern design, the defendant said.

Robert H. Stetson, of 223 Decatur street, who lives opposite the present dairy plant, called as a defense witness, testified that he has not heard much noise from the plant that is only sixty feet away.

"There are noises from the cider mill, the planing mill, the rubber mill and other business places in our section of town," Mr. Stetson testified. "These noises start sometimes as early as 5.30 a. m. The Smith plant noises (Continued on Page 4)

EASTER EGG HUNT MUCH ENJOYED AT SMITH HOME

Large Group Enjoys Festivities at Residence in Bath Addition

MRS. LAKE IS WINNER

Mrs. Alexander Smith, of Orchard avenue, West Bristol, entertained at her home on Saturday afternoon an Easter egg hunt.

The eggs were colored marshmallow ones and were concealed in the branches of trees, in clumps of grass, under stones and papers and various other places. The hunt created a great deal of fun among the merry-makers.

Mrs. Sara Lake gathered the most eggs for which she received a prize, while Mrs. George Pollard found the least, for which she was compensated with a "booby" prize.

A day afternoon was enjoyed and refreshments were served.

The guests included: Mrs. R. Corkran, Mrs. E. Ferguson, Mrs. George Pollard, Miss Rita Burke, Mrs. Marjorie Yates, Miss Winnifred Ellis, Mrs. Arthur Ludwig, Mrs. Eugene Leeper, Mrs. Mabel Conover, Mrs. William White, Mrs. Marion Jackson, Miss Elsie Dietrich, Mrs. Edward Kelber.

Miss Mildred Kelber, Mrs. James Lake, Mrs. Helen Bryner, Miss Susanah McDonald, Mrs. Florence Marsden, Miss Sara Rogers, Miss Alma Bennett, Mrs. Mae Baur, Mrs. Sophia Gilbert, Mrs. Marcella Bloodgood, Mrs. Emma Guy and Mrs. George West.

Physical Education Talk Given at Andalusia Meeting

ANDALUSIA, April 22.—Guests who attended the meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Andalusia schools, in the school house on Bristol Pike, last evening, were: Miss Dorothy Stunkard, instructress of swimming at Temple University, Philadelphia; Samuel K. Faust, supervising principal of the Bensalem Township public schools; and Charles Markley, of Andalusia.

Miss Stunkard gave an enlightening talk upon "Physical Education," and urged parents to co-operate with the school board, the teachers and the scholars. She spoke of the necessity of children in learning fair play, teamwork, and ability to lose well as well as to win. The motto of the physical education group is "A Clean Mind in a Clean Body."

Mr. Faust endorsed Miss Stunkard's talk; and gave helpful suggestions relating to Parent-Teacher Association meetings.

A vote of thanks was extended to the two who spoke. Those in attendance at the session were invited to visit the new school building on Poquessing avenue. The exhibit of work of the teachers and students was thoroughly enjoyed; much commendation being accorded the teachers for the manner of display of the exhibits.

At the close of the delightful session refreshments were served.

South Langhorne Population Increases 232 in Ten Years

NORRISTOWN, Apr. 22.—The population of South Langhorne, as shown by a preliminary count of the returns of the fifteenth census, taken as of April 1, 1930, is 789, as compared with 557 on January 1, 1920. This shows an increase of 232 inhabitants of the Bucks County borough.

The 1930 figures are preliminary and subject to correction.

There were three farms enumerated in this area at the 1930 census.

CIVIL WAR VETERAN DIES AT GRANDDAUGHTER'S

James Jolly, Who Saw Plenty of Action in Army, Answers Final Call

LIVED HERE MANY YRS.

James Jolly, Civil War veteran who died at the home of his granddaughter, Mrs. Clarence E. Stotts, 3039 N. Carlisle street, Philadelphia, yesterday afternoon, will be buried Thursday afternoon at two o'clock from the funeral parlors of the H. S. Rue Estate, 325 Mill street, Bristol. Interment will be in the Bristol cemetery and friends may call Wednesday evening. The Rev. George F. Hess, pastor of the Bristol M. E. church will officiate.

The deceased veteran had been ill for several months at the Stotts home and his advanced age made his recovery impossible. He is survived by two sons, Howard, Philadelphia; George, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mr. Jolly was a veteran of the Civil War who had participated in seven fierce successive battles, coming through without even a scratch. For many years Mr. Jolly was a resident of Bristol and made his home on Wilson street.

Born in Churchville, Pa., on the 22nd day of December, 1835, Mr. Jolly spent a greater portion of his early life in the army.

COUNTY S. P. C. A. HAS A NEW AGENT IN FIELD

H. K. Mellendorf, Located at Hollicong, Will Assist With Work; Asks for Funds

OBSERVE HUMANE WK.

Bucks County S. P. C. A. now has another agent, H. K. Mellendorf, located at Hollicong. It is announced by the Bucks County organization that complaints of cruelty may be sent to this new agent, as well as request for care of homeless, injured or stray small animals for which a properly equipped animal ambulance will call. Mr. Mellendorf's phone number is Buckingham 37-R-6.

This step follows a long felt need in the county for a refuge to which small animals may be taken and there will no longer be any excuse for any person in the county to place on a road or to "lose" a dog or cat which is not wanted.

This week is being celebrated as Humane or Kindness to Animals Week, and folks in all sections of the county are giving more thought and attention to their dumb friends.

The officers will be glad to welcome new members in this humanitarian work, and will appreciate work in any line, as well as financial aid. A great field of work lies ahead for the society, but to accomplish all that is desired funds are needed. A special plea is sent out during this week for assistance in a financial manner.

Headquarters are located at Doylestown; and the organization is headed by George S. Hotchkiss, Vice-presidents are Henry Afflerbach and Edward L. Steckel.

FIVE CLASSES ARE PLANNED FOR MUTT SHOW IN BRISTOL

Groups Include Ugliest, Prettiest, Cleanest, Largest and Smallest Dogs

TO BE FIFTEEN PRIZES

Joint Meeting Held by Travel
Club and Boys' Week
Mutt Show Committee

Bristol's "mutt show," to be held May 6th, is going to be a corker. At a meeting of the joint committee of the Travel Club and the Boys' Week "mutt show" committee last night, preliminary plans were made for this event. Every boy and girl in town is eligible to exhibit his or her pet dog. There will be five classes, and three prizes in each class—the ugliest dogs, cleanest dogs, prettiest dogs, largest dogs, and smallest dogs.

Every dog in town is eligible. It may be a pedigreed dog, or a dog that doesn't know its own father—that makes no difference. The judges will not be dog experts—they'll just be folks who love dogs and know a good mutt when they see one. And to make the show absolutely free from any suspicion of favoritism, the judges will be brought in from out of town.

The show will be held under cover, and there will be a very small fee charged for admission, also a very small entrance fee, these charges being necessary to cover the expenses incident to the show. It had been suggested that the show be held out of doors, but if the day should be rainy the show would be spoiled, so it was decided to have it in a centrally located building. It will be held from about 5 o'clock until 9 the evening of Tuesday, May 6th.

The Bristol Boy Scouts will assist the general committee in preparing the exhibit hall, and in other ways. County Scout Executive W. E. Livermore, of Doylestown, was present at the meeting in the Travel Club Home last evening to outline the cooperative plan, by which the Travel Club, the county S. P. C. A., the Boy Scouts and the Boys' Week committee will work together to make Bristol's first "mutt show" something to be talked about for weeks to come. There ought to be a hundred or so mutts in the show, and a square deal is guaranteed their proud owners.

The members of the committee which have the affair in charge are as follows: John W. Colton, chairman; Miss Marian B. Smith, chairman of finance sub-committee; John H. Hardy, chairman of administration sub-committee; Mrs. Richard W. French, chairman of publicity sub-committee; Mrs. John H. Hardy and Richard W. French.

Entry blanks will be in the possession of Miss Smith very shortly, and further details will be made public through the local papers.

FOUND ALONG HIGHWAY

A man giving the name of Joseph Lothery, Edgely avenue, Edgely, was taken to the Harriman Hospital, last evening, to be treated for cuts and contused wounds of the head. The injured one was found by two men who were en route to Philadelphia. Lothery was lying along the highway near the upper end of Bristol. After the injuries were treated the Edgely resident was taken to the police station. He was unable to tell how his injuries had been caused.

Mrs. Henry Tyrol, of Trenton, N. J., paid a visit over the holiday week-end to her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Murray, of 739 Spruce street.

HULMEVILLE

On Thursday, April 24th, the Courier will begin the publication of a series of interesting articles dealing with the past and present of the Borough of Hulmeville.

The article has been prepared by a staff representative after numerous interviews, extensive consultation of histories and the delving into old records relative to this ancient and interesting community.

The first portion will deal at length with the founder, John Hulme, and his family, his business methods, and the commencement of growth of the early post village after his settlement there.

The early organizations, the first bank in Bucks County located at Hulmeville, the old dwellings and public buildings will be told of, as well as the later associations, churches, and community projects.

The articles will run for several days, so in order to insure receipt of copies, those not subscribing to the Courier are urged to order it at once. Prompt delivery is made early each evening.

MACAREL-TIME

Mackerel-time is dawning.

The first of the 200 vessels of the Gloucester fishing fleet arrived at the fishing grounds several days ago and settled down to await the signal that the mackerel are running. The other ships were even then ready to put out on their yearly pilgrimage. The fish are moving northward, and soon the annual race for the first cargo of finny treasure will be run.

Merer landlubbers can sense the thrill of the rivalry of the mackerel fleet. Its skippers come from fishing families, some of them going generations back, and their pride in their vessels is as great as that of a turfman in his thoroughbreds.

For weeks before the fishing season opens they labor over their craft, getting them "tuned" to the greatest speed. Then for days they lie in port awaiting the signal. It comes, and in the scant dawn they are off, straining to be first to reach the fishing ground. Then back, wallowing with a wriggling, silver cargo, nosing out one, two, a dozen close rivals and winning by a matter of minutes. Would it be mackerel season without that race? Never!

Here is true amateur sport, free of all suspicion of commercialism or professionalism. And yet it attracts no spectators, races before no crowded stadium. The puzzling feature of the thing is that the mackerel fleet races have never produced a Tex Rickard to stage them before a million-dollar audience.

GRAINS OF SALT

Grains of salt instead of cases of tea.

The Indian village of Dandi instead of Colonial Boston.

An emaciated and saintly liberator, instead of American patriots in masquerade.

Shall Mahatma Gandhi's gesture of making salt on the beach of Dandi by evaporating sea water, in defiance of the British salt monopoly, have the light of India for independence the same significance as the Boston Tea Party had to American independence?

Gandhi seems to think that the time is ripe for Indian independence, but he will strike by passive resistance and disobedience to British law. He would like nothing better than to be martyred by the British, and the British, knowing it, are just as keen to avoid the trap.

Whether India wins political independence as a result of this passive rebellion will depend largely upon how the British government handles the situation. Force will not save it; tact and patience may.

Disaffection with British domination in India is of long standing. Even repetition with British domination in India is of long standing, never-kept promises of dominion status no longer stills the cry for self-rule. The more extreme Nationalists will accept nothing short of complete independence.

All the world is interested in the outcome, which will have far-reaching political and economic effects.

About the only change the new moral code has made in the movies is to call the old stuff a "moral lesson."

SYNOPSIS

David Wade, arriving at a white settlement in New Guinea, goes on a prolonged spree during which he is robbed of his savings. Stella Blackney, who runs the only hotel in the place, with her dipsomaniac mother, tells him that O'Shane, keeper of the store where Wade obtained his liquor, robbed him, but when he accuses O'Shane of the theft in the girl's presence, she assures O'Shane that it is all a mistake—that Wade was only bluffing. But later when she is alone with Wade, she tells him that her mother has forced her into marrying O'Shane and she fears that he will soon claim his rights as a husband.

CHAPTER II—Continued

"But it is real love. There is no doubt about it. Love is not the perquisite of the virtuous. A bad man can love as deeply and profoundly as a good man. O'Shane loves me as devotedly as any man loved woman, no matter how upright and honorable."

She leaned forward. "Listen. When he came to Samora first he had given up his old way of life, which was a pretty bad one, I can tell you. He had reformed himself and was content to live more or less quietly and honestly, and make just enough money to provide against the contingencies of the future."

"I know," said Wade. "The schooner-captain told me."

"Well, love for me has altered all that. It is love that has sent him back to his old ways. Love always works for good, they say. It does nothing of the kind." There was a harshness in her voice, as though she blamed the love as much as she blamed O'Shane; and the sentiment of it shocked him, for he was something of an idealist.

"And your mother agreed that you should marry him?"

"O'Shane became dissatisfied with the honest life. There was not enough money in it. He wanted to give me all possible comfort and luxury. No two rooms and a kitchen for the girl he loved! At the monthly parlance last week, when the pearls came in to sell their finds and refit for another trip to the shell-beds a large and valuable pearl went missing. O'Shane stole it. The others suspected him; but I know. And he robbed you. It is all part of his scheme to give me what he calls a 'good time.' That will show what love can do."

Wade made no answer. It seemed to him there was none to make. Never before had he thought of love in a light like this. It all sounded extremely distasteful. His sympathy for the girl was not in the least diminished, however.

"And your mother agreed to his proposal that you should marry him?" he said presently.

"She thought it a fine chance to get a new start and to have a son-in-law upon whom she could rely in future emergencies," Stella replied. "She pleaded with me, and threatened. But for a long time I could not do it. It was too terrible altogether. . . . But why drag it out? I gave in at last, for I was being worn out by the continual bickering. Had there been a way of escaping from Samora I would have gone, even had it meant dressing as a boy and stowing away. But the steamer comes only once in four months. . . . I gave in."

"But if you are married, how is it no one in the settlement seems to know anything about it?"

"I made a stipulation, a proviso, that my husband should not claim me while my mother lived and that meanwhile the whole thing should be kept quiet. I don't know why I insisted on this, for I knew that my mother could not behave as she was doing and live long. In my desperation I wanted breathing-time—perhaps—time to accustom myself to an order of things revolting in the extreme. Perhaps I hoped some means of escape would show. . . . I don't know. . . . We were married at the mission. The parson and wife nesses were made to promise silence."

"But how do you know he will wait?" Wade asked. "Forgive me for questioning you like this, but the whole thing seems so dreadful as to be almost unreal. What is to prevent him claiming you now?"

"He will wait. He knows he has me safe. Besides, I swore I would kill myself if he didn't wait. He knows I meant it, and he doesn't dare the risk. He loves me too much. He won't have to wait long. My mother is ill again—and this time it is serious. She is dying—dying—you know what it means to me!"

She sought to correct her stumbling speech, and failed.

"He comes every day—the beast—to see—to see—how she is—"

She stopped, and her grip of his shoulders tightened.

"I won't go to him! I won't! Marriage or no marriage! I can't do it! I'll kill myself first!"

Her face was aflame, and her eyes were globes of black fire.

"But I don't want to die! I want to live! I want life, which can be beautiful—not death, which is hideous!"

She pointed to the cutters.

"My mother bought one of those boats some time ago. She had some idea of sending it trading; but all it did was to add to our debts."

Her breast was heaving convulsively, the movement plain beneath the thinness of her garment.

"David Wade, you dear, clean-living boy, take me away before he comes to claim me! Take me with you to the Solomons, or wherever it is you are going! I don't care where it is, so long as I get away from here, from O'Shane. David, David, I have been building on you helping me. It was for this that I tried to prevent you drinking. It nearly broke my heart when I found you had been robbed. I was near to the bottom of bottomless despair. You were—are—my only hope. But, David, we will get the money back. I know we will!"

Her arms left his shoulders, and, warm and living, crept about his neck.

"Take me with you! You can help me over the chain! I must get away! Take me! There is a boat. Let us provision it and sail away—just you and I—"

His quick ear catching sound of approaching footsteps, Wade had placed a hand silencing across her lips.

CHAPTER III.

"It's Lo-oru," said Stella, as a native girl came up and stood shyly before them—a girl pleasing of expression and shape of face, clad only in the short, fibre skirt of her kind, and holding her supple body straightly, as though afraid her half-nudity would emphasize a stoop. "I asked her to come here and repeat to you a story she told me an hour or two ago."

She nodded to the girl to begin. Lo-oru said she knew who had robbed the white man. She had seen him and his companions lying asleep on the beach that night she said, and for a time watched them, wondering at their foolishness; then, as she turned to go, she saw a man approach and bend over Wade. At which she had stepped into the deep shadow of a palm and watched, but in the darkness could not see clearly what it was he did. Presently, however, leaving the man, she stepped into a stream of lamplight from the store, and she saw that it was O'Shane, and that he was carrying something—a wallet. She saw him enter the store, then she hurried away.

"You see?" said Stella, when she stopped. "There's no doubt about it, is there?"

Lo-oru's statement was certainly decisive, clear, and unflinching; and to Wade quite conclusive of the storekeeper's guilt but for one thing—it was distinctly unusual for natives to wander after dark, believing as they did in nocturnal and actively malevolent spirits.

The white girl looked at the brown.

"Go on; tell it all!"

But a sudden confusion came to Lo-oru. She averted her eyes; her head drooped a little; her fingers idled with the fibres of her skirt. Stella urged her again, and on receiving no reply explained that she was ashamed. Then she herself gave the reason for Lo-oru's late wandering.

"O'Shane had her locked in a back-room, and she had escaped. I 'locked' in a room!" Wade cried. "Why, what for?"

"Don't you understand? He is like that. I told you before. It's one of the reasons I can never be his wife."

He had been pursuing Lo-oru for a long time, she went on; but Lo-oru would have nothing of him, she being a "good girl" employed at the mission, and besides, being engaged to marry one of the crew of Mrs. Blackney's cutter.

POLLYANNA

A "slow pay" customer sent the following note to his grocer: "Please send me 6 dozen eggs; if good will send check."

The grocer, however, was not doing business on such risky terms, so he wrote back:

"Send check; if good, will send 6 dozen eggs."

One wonders what goes with all the second hand cars that won't go.

He had been trying all evening to summon the courage to tell her. It was a thing that really required a great deal of intrepidity. She was his ideal. Slim, brown-eyed, beautiful golden hair. As he gazed at her he finally made up his mind.

"Darling," he said, "I love you. If I asked you to be my wife what would be the outcome?"

"It depends," came the reply, "very much on the income."

However, occasionally there are more brains in the back seat than at the wheel.

"Will you let me off this afternoon, sir?" asked the clerk. "My wife would like for me to clean our wall paper."

"Couldn't possibly do it," answered the boss.

The clerk turned joyfully to his work, saying: "Thank you, sir. Thank you a thousand times."

Home runs are again listed among the items for which the demand is greater than the supply.

First Flapper: "Is your boy friend a lady killer?"

Second Ditto: "I'll say he is. He starves 'em to death!"

TRAVELING MAN ENTHUSIASTIC ABOUT KONJOLA

"Will Never Be Without This Great Medicine On My Trips," He Declares

MR. JOSEPH H. LEE

"I suffered for years with a badly disordered stomach," said Mr. Joseph H. Lee, traveling salesman, 214 North Center Street, Pottsville. "My liver, too, was badly disordered and my system gradually became filled with poisons. I was subject to bilious attacks and headaches. Gas pains around my heart were terrible at times and my heart action was seriously affected. I had little or no appetite and was fast becoming run down and unable to do justice to my work."

"Never will I be without this wonderful medicine, Konjola, on my trips. It required but a few weeks for Konjola to banish every one of my health ailments. My stomach is strong and my appetite is excellent today. My liver functions as it should and I am free from bilious attacks and headaches. My nerves are steady and I sleep well at night. My entire system has been built up by this great compound and I am endorsing it wherever I go."

Konjola is not a "cure-all," there is no such thing. When taken for from six to eight weeks, this great medicine will produce amazing results. The countless thousands of endorsements of Konjola have proven that it makes good in even the most stubborn cases.

Konjola is sold in Bristol, Pa., at Hoffman's Cut Rate Store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section. (Adv.)

Check-Up Shows That 317 Convicts Lost Lives

 "Did you see any guards rescue any trapped convicts?" the Welfare Director asked.

"No. The smoke was too dense."
 "Did you see the flames?"
 "Goodness, yes!"

And then, just as he finished, he said: "I never in my life saw so much smoke as was in that cell block."

L. G. Schooley, a trustee, and former Cleveland councilman, who was sent up after being implicated in Cleveland's famous playground bribery scandal case was another witness.

He said he was in the guardroom when the first alarm spread.

"Did you get the keys?" came Griswold's question.

"I reached for the key rack, but it was empty," Schooley declared.

In contrast to that statement was the testimony of Cleveland Johnson, another trustee, who not only declared that Schooley had the keys, but also that Schooley had refused to give them to him when he had pleaded for them.

Director Griswold, after spending the better part of the night and early morning in the probe, adjourned for a brief time, but later continued the investigation in order to solve the enigma:

"Where were the keys?"

Geraci-Papotto Nuptials Are Celebrated at St. Ann's, Here

A very pretty church wedding took place yesterday in St. Ann's Catholic Church, when Miss Mary Papotto, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carmelo Papotto, of 301 Lafayette street, became the bride of Vito Geraci, of Upper Darby. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Isidore Jenne.

The bride was attired in a beautiful white dress, the bodice of which was made of white lace, low neck and sleeveless, and the skirt was satin, made long in the back and shorter in the front. She wore white slippers with rhinestone buckles, white silk stockings, and her tulle veil was cap shaped trimmed with pearls and orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white calla lilies.

The maid of honor, Miss Rose Gulotto, of 360 Lafayette street, was attractive in a gown of pink trimmed with pink net. The bodice was tight-fitting with shirring in the front, made with low neck, sleeveless, and the skirt was long and full, ending in the uneven hemline. A pink flower was worn on the right shoulder. She wore silver slippers and stockings, pink Greta Garbo hat trimmed with net and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses.

Miss Concetta Puglisi, of Philadelphia, was bridesmaid, and she wore a pretty gown of mild green satin trimmed with net. The bodice was tight-fitting and made of lace, low neck and sleeveless. Her slippers and stockings were silver, and her hat was green to match her dress and she carried an arm bouquet of pink roses.

Marie Papotto, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Papotto, of 301 Lafayette street, a niece of the bride, was flower girl and she was attired in a dress of pink crepe-de-chine trimmed with ruffles, shirring around the neck and made sleeveless. She wore white silk socks and white satin slippers, a rhinestone band around her hair and carried a basket of pink roses.

The little ring-bearer was Tony Cipriotti, of Philadelphia, who was dressed in a white satin suit and carried a beautiful white satin pillow, bearing the wedding ring.

The best man was Peter S. Mozhno, of Drexel Hill.

After the wedding, a reception was held at the home of the bride, four hundred guests attending. A five-piece orchestra from Philadelphia furnished the music for the dancing and Frank Cipriotti, of Philadelphia, sang several tenor solos. The bride and groom left late in the evening for their honeymoon and they will be away about one week. The bride wore as her traveling costume, a black chiffon dress trimmed with lace, satin slippers and silk stockings, lace hat and satin coat to match. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Geraci will make their home at Mineola Court Apartments, Upper Darby. Mrs. Geraci has been a resident of Bristol for the past fifteen years and attended the public schools. Mr. Geraci operates a hair-dressing establishment in Elizabeth Manor Apartments, Upper Darby. The bride and groom were recipients of many beautiful gifts.

SHED IS DESTROYED

Fire early last evening destroyed a shed of a house along the canal back of Tullytown. The property is owned by the Warner Sand Company. Firemen could not reach the scene with their apparatus and had to use buckets. Goodwill No. 3 of Bristol was called.

Civil War Veteran Dies At Granddaughter's Home

 life in Northampton Township, engaging in farming. He was the oldest of six children, and during his youth worked on various farms in the section where he resided. During his boyhood his education was furnished at the public schools at Hathboro and Churchville. One year was spent in the pursuit of studies at the Holland school; and another time he attended sessions at the Davisville school.

Enlisting August 1, 1861, in Company One, of Bristol, the young soldier was assigned to the Third Pennsylvania Reserves. He recruited in Easton and was immediately sent to a camp near Washington, from which point, six months later, he was forwarded to Camp Pierpont, Virginia.

In May of 1862 the men in the same division as Mr. Jolly were assigned to duty at Yorktown, and it was then that the seven strenuous battles were engaged in. One of these encounters was at Ganes Hill and another at Seven Pines. The battle along the banks of the James River, just after the encounter with the enemy at Seven Pines was said to be a bloody affair, many men being lost on both sides, according to records.

The clothing of Mr. Jolly showed marks where the bullets had pierced the material but he escaped without a scratch. He was also a participant in the Second Battle of Bull Run where the soldiers were driven back. Captain Beatty, in whose honor H. Clay Beatty Post, No. 73, G. A. R., was named, was killed in this engagement.

Other affairs throughout Virginia and the Battle of Antietam were other conflicts in which Mr. Jolly saw action.

At the close of the war Mr. Jolly arrived in Bristol on June 6, 1865. He was employed by Henry Wright who then conducted a coal yard here. He was employed here for 15 years then went to work for the late D. Landreth Seed Company. He later held positions with the Corona Leather Works.

The deceased was a member of Bristol Fire Co., No. 1, for over 50 years and at one time was a driver of the apparatus. He was also a member of the Bristol M. E. Church.

Dairyman Tells Court His Side of Injunction Case

 never prevented anyone from sleeping in our house."

Stetson testified that he has been awakened from the elder mill noises, but that he has never noticed any noises from the Smith plant.

Wilson H. Swartley, builder, whose residence adjoins the Smith plant, was called by the defendant.

"The section of the town in which the Smith plant is located has always been a business section," Mr. Swartley testified.

The witness was questioned as to various business enterprises in the Decatur and Wood street sections dating back fifty years or more.

Humane Education Work Is Rapidly Expanding

 Two gifts to the memorial trust fund for animal pets were received, one for $150 and another for $5.

Mrs. Fannie G. Risdon, educational secretary in charge of humane education and publicity, told of very extensive work in the schools and with Bands of Mercy and Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts that are cooperating in the pet shows, poster campaigns and other work that is being carried on. Parent-teacher associations have helped, Mrs. Risdon reported, and steps have been taken for Humane Week programs. There are 20 Bands of Mercy. Yesterday an exhibit of the attractive posters made was staged at the meeting and it was highly praised.

President Hotchkiss and other members expressed appreciation of the action of the County Commissioners in appropriating $200 for the year to assist in carrying on the work.

New members elected were: W. Lawrence Mason, I. J. Vanartsdalen, Doylestown; Mrs. Theodore Norcross, Mrs. J. Howard Penrose, Warminster; Mrs. Elizabeth Gastin, Mrs. William Molloy, Ivyland; Thomas E. Frame, Henry Spalding, Wyncote; Mrs. W. R. Cooper, Holicon; Mrs. Anna Roberts, Newtown; Mrs. Grace Nortenheim, Trevoze.

In the near future the society will conduct a drive for membership and financial assistance.

War Aviators in Endurance Flight

Four war aviators are planning to make one of the most unusual and daring endurance flights ever attempted, under the leadership of Chief Pilot Donaldson. They will start the flight at the Suncoast Country Club, at Eaton, N. J. Not alone will they refuel in the air at regular intervals, but the pilot of the plane will be changed and a fresh one will replace him every fifty hours. The above photo-diagram shows how these daring aviators will, by means of a rope ladder, leave the endurance plane and later lessen the load on the accompanying plane, through parachute leaps to earth.

(International Newsreel)

The constructive stunts that have done so much towards the progress of aviation continue to offer thrills to aviators who find that routine flying has become just about as exciting as a trolley ride. Trans-continental flights, altitude marks and endurance tests have all offered a spectacular means of adding to the freedom of the air, and just when it was believed that stunts themselves had become commonplace and rather in the nature of an anti-climax, along come four musketeers of the air with another breathtaking stunt.

The four aviators—Major Donald Hudson, Lieutenant Ray Cullman, Captain John Donaldson and Duke

Reid—are all veteran fliers, with wonderful war records, and all anxious to do something for the cause of national supremacy in aviation. And so a new endurance mark is introduced. The aviators will not only refuel the tanks of the endurance planes while in the air, but they will endeavor to change the pilot of the plane after every fifty hours in a spectacular way. If plans work out as they should, the new pilot will board the plane by a rope ladder from the refueling plane, while the old pilot will leave the machine via the parachute route. The flight will commence at the Suncoast Country Club, at Eaton, N. J., and it is expected that crowds will be on hand to watch the progress of the new circus of the air. Of course, the feat is a dangerous one, but that is just what makes it attractive to these intrepid aviators—the thrills and the belief that the feat will be of interest and importance to all who hold the progress of aviation is essential to the progress of the nation.
